ABOUT
Jansen Newman Institute (JNI), established in 1978 by Margaret Newman and David Jansen, is one of the oldest private providers of applied psychotherapy and counselling education in Australia.

JNI offers courses covering three main specialist areas: counselling, psychotherapy, and community services. These courses range from Masters level through to Bachelor, Diploma and short courses. JNI students gain practical and industry-relevant experience through our on-campus community clinic, where their applied learning is supervised by expert counsellors. JNI’s The Wellbeing Clinic at Pyrmont campus is open to the public and specialises in a wide range of issues including stress, conflict, work/life balance, relationships and self-esteem. Students are able to explore new aspects of human relationships while experiencing the rich counselling tradition that runs through JNI.

Careers pursued by graduates include addiction counselling, youth work, women’s health, family services, ageing and retirement, change management, conflict resolution and mediation, child protection, community counselling agencies, disability services and human resources. Situated in a premium location close to Sydney’s Darling Harbour, JNI is close to public transport, shops and local attractions. Many JNI courses may also be studied through our Flexible and Online Learning system, allowing students to design a study program to fit their lifestyle.
