Interpretation and Translation Service Providers

General Information

Most translation service providers offer not only translation services but also interpretation assistance. Service fees are standard across the market because of strong competition. The actual fees will vary depending upon the content and complexity of the translated documents or the complexity of the interpreting service required.

In Thailand, there is no official accreditation or certification for translators. Any person can provide translation services. However, translated documents may need to be certified by relevant Thai authorities such as the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Ministry of Education, etc. Some other documents may also require certification from a Notary Public.¹

As a result, service providers usually offer not only to translate documents but also to have translated documents certified by relevant Thai authorities or a Notary Public. When requesting translation services, you should clearly indicate your certification requirements to the service provider.

Disclaimer

The following list has been compiled to provide general assistance to Australians in search of language interpretation and document translation services in Thailand.

The service providers have been included in this list from open sources because they are located in the central business district near the Embassy. The Embassy does not endorse nor recommend any of the listed providers over any others. Our intention is to provide general guidelines to assist in your initial search only.

The Embassy does not accept any responsibility what so ever in relation to the service providers on the attached list, including the services provided by them.

¹ In Thailand, a Notary Public is only a lawyer licensed under the Lawyers Council of Thailand who passes an additional training course and receives a certification as a Notarial Services Attorney.
